Subject: Louisiana energy services and the NRC

During the first test of the atomic bomb, the commander of the project required the wind be blowing in a certain direction away from the bomb site, so the fallout would not go over populated areas.

With the Les enrichment plant having radioactive emissions and the plant life to be in the decades, and the Nrc's own tests showing the pollutants going over populated areas, the NRC simply declares there are no high winds in this area and the radioactive emissions are "safe".

How times have changed.

How do you protect children from breathing radioactivity?
