Actually, there are two variations of the blue cards. Ones that have a box to check for which session you attended (afternoon. evening, or both) and then a set that is lacking the session option. I am thinking that maybe they ran out of the blue cards that had a session option (because having more than one meeting is not typical and perhaps these were made specifically for STP), and then they just started using the other blue cards (which are standard) without the session option.

Can you ask someone who was at the meeting handing out cards if that is the case? If so, that means that all those people attended the evening meeting.
