Chris,

I don't know if you received this via Gene or Tobias, or not...but this is why I initially questioned the timing of the inspector submissions for training now after all this time.

This was something I had brought up back on May 12th as a potential issue.

Tobias,

This message is to provide you with some feedback on the accompaniments of Ed Cutler and Mark Rayman. In summary, both did a very good job with the portions of the inspection they were reviewing. Their interactions with the licensees was very professional and their review of the licensee's program was very comprehensive. They asked the right questions, made certain to look at the most risk significant activities the licensee performs, and overall gave the program a good scrub. Again, they performed a good inspection.

Some areas where I think things could be improved might be considering moving towards an even more performance based approach to inspecting. Understand that both of the guys did look at activities and talked through how their programs functioned. But your forms tend to drive them to perform a records based inspection. None of this is a requirement, but performance based inspecting can reveal issues in a licensee's program that a records based review simply can't. We'll discuss this more next month while we're in your office.

Lastly, and this was more pronounced with Mark than with Ed, but it appears that Mark hasn't been to any of the NRC sponsored (and paid for) training courses other than the IC training course. We'll certainly be discussing this more next month, but I wanted to give you a heads up about this issue.
