Subject: Nuclear Regulatory Commission and Recycling of Radioactive Waste

I am VERY concerned about the standard setting process the NRC is conducting on recycling of radioactive wastes into ordinary products that consumers will use. I can anticipate that the end result will be a recommendation for this recycling since it is in their interests. It would be more reassuring if an independent commission were reviewing this issue. As far as I can see, there is no safe level of radiation. Just because we have to endure some background radiation in our life does not mean it is benign.

We should recycle none of this material and should stop generating new material.

Thanks,
