Comments: The idea alone of dumping hazardous waste on reservation land is enough to cause grave concern. Having studied the horrendous treatment of Native Americans over the past five hundred years, it is inconceivable that a nation that is shocked by Hitlers actions can turn in denial of their own brutal history. So that now, rather than working to make amends, we add further insult to injury by treating Native Americans once more as expendable, and less than human. They have already been impoverished by being pushed onto the least productive lands in our "proud" nation. Now we would further take advantage of their poverty by heaping our toxic wastes, which their ancestors would never have allowed to be created, onto their laps. I am ashamed to belong to a nation so lacking in conscience!
