Dear Sirs,

Our group is alarmed that you are thinking of letting low-level contaminated soils be used for any purpose where it will be in contact with the general public. The NRC has made some horrible mistakes in the past. Don't make another. Keep all contaminated soil and other materials under regulatory control. The NRC has already set radiation benchmarks that nuclear power plants must meet before they can be decommissioned. Do not set standards that would allow individual aspects of the plants to be released from regulatory control prior to a shutdown.

Sincerely,

Joan Linney
