Dear Dr. Shum:

My husband and I enjoyed living in Southern California for thirty years but when we retired, we wanted to find a place that had clean air, less traffic and less crime. It took us three years to find the place that met our cultural, educational, social and environmental needs - and that city was Cedar City, Utah.

Soon after moving to Cedar City, we learned, much to our dismay, that many cancers and deaths had occurred here due to the nuclear testing and resulting fallout from Nevada. Now we are informed that a consortium of out-of-state nuclear power companies want to move all of the nuclear waste in the United States to the state of Utah! No state should be required or forced to take all of the countries nuclear waste! Our three beautiful grand children live directly East of the planned nuclear waste storage site and the prevailing winds would carry any mishaps or leaks directly at them.

The nuclear wastes are now stored safely. To propose to move them could only cause the extreme danger of leaks or accidents. God has blessed this state with many beautiful state and national parks along with clear skies, clean rivers and streams and towering mountains. Please reject the proposal of the Private Fuel Storage company to move all or any nuclear wastes to the state of Utah.

Sincerely yours,
