The Commission* was briefed by the staff and Administrator Frank Young of the Food and Drug Administration on recent events with potential impact on public health and safety relating to the use of static eliminators containing polonium-210 manufactured by the Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Company.

Chairman Zech requested the staff to investigate the need to broaden the distribution of the recall order of the polonium-210 static eliminator to other facilities (which may not have been identified in the original distribution list) and to inform the Commission of any decision permitting the continued use of the polonium-210 static eliminators.

The staff committed to inform the Commission whether or not a safety assessment was conducted as part of the licensing renewal process on changing the epoxy bonding material in the static eliminators.
