Subject: Re: Heavy Loads Telecon w/NEI - Decommissioning TWG

Rich, Ed, Glenn and I met with Gary this afternoon to discuss our status on heavy loads and Monday's call with NEI. Here's a summary of the meeting/ what we plan to tell NEI.

At the workshop, NEI requested that we look at the upper bound values used in the PRA and to credit for -0612 actions. We committed to provide feedback shortly after. This telecon will fulfill that action.

Ed went back and looked at information NEI had supplied (cask loads); new navy data, and information from NEI on our assumptions (100 lifts. etc) to recalculate. His estimate includes a single failure proof crane; And -0612 did give credit for action such as procedures, safeload paths, and training. The new point estimate mean is 1.0 E-6 (rather than 2.5E-6 from draft study).

drop leading to loss of inventory
 Based on the information we have available, this is the most accurate answer we can calculate. If a non-single failure proof crane was used, the answer would have been higher.

We look forward to the NEI PRA paper that may provide additional information for us to consider during our review. They may also provide any additional information that they think we should consider.

Since we using this information to risk-inform our process and are not basing any decision entirely on the risk assessment, we plan to use this risk information to help focus our efforts on appropriate criteria that is risk-informed and provide adequate defense in depth. NEI proposed that decommissioned plants will commit to Phase 1 and Phase 2. However, we are not at the point in our process of deciding on criteria. We will consider it when criteria are discussed.

Provided below is the time and place for the telecon. Please let me know if you feel we need any additions or deletions. I think we should try to limit the discussion on the actual numbers.

I have set up a conference call with NEI to continue discussions on the treatment of heavy loads at decommissioning nuclear power plants. The call will be made at 10:00 am on Monday August 23 from conference room 0-11 B6. I have already canvassed most of you and confirmed availability to support this telecon. Please let me if for some good reason, you can't attend. Thanks ----- Bill
