aComments= Dear Sis:

How secure is our Salt River Nuclear Generating Station near Buckeye, Arizona?
Let's hope it's better than this one below.

This link: <http://www.earthfiles.com/earth320.htm> takes you to an interview, with pictures, conducted by Linda Moulton Howe with Scott Portzline, Former Security Chairman for Three Mile Island Alert (TMIA), Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

On January 31, 2002 he photographed something that amazes me considering we are at war. At the Three Mile Island Nuclear Power Plant north entrance, the main entrance, he observed that there was nobody there. There was a guard shack - which was empty. A pick-up drove up to the entrance, slowed down and voluntarily stopped. (by the grace of God) Had it been intruders (an Al-Qaeda cell) who had malevolent intent, they could easily have driven across the bridge, on to the island, into the parking lot and then into our history books.

Please don't say it couldn't happen in Arizona. I never thought I'd happen to watch a jet fly into a skyscraper, live on TV, as I was getting ready for work one morning. My illusions have been shattered like the windows on the 88th floor that fateful day.

Can you possibly do something? Rather, quickly?

Sincerely,

Debra S. Hamilton
