Just a suggestion...

If you are going to call someone into the IRC for an event like last night, you might want to either: (1) be ready to forward them on to the event site; (2) forward them on to a hotel near the event site, where I can relieve someone the following morning; or (3) have an active position for them to fill in the IRC.

Having me come in after a full day of conducting an outage inspection, then sit around for several hours, served none of us well. Calling and telling me to stand-by for possible activation, as you did for some others, would have probably been preferable.

Thanks,
Joe
