Jack, this one came from Al Bach 207 633 0333

In 1956, summer, George Fredericks, a Naval Academy graduate stationed at Lowry with AF Academy, had his F-86 flame out on the pitch-out; he tried to make it back to the field, not ejecting because he was over Lowry; his wing caught the chimney of the last house next to the field, and crashed and was killed. Had he ejected, he would have been saved probably, but the F-86 would have crashed in a populated area.
