CIO release

I don't think the issue is all non-nrc Web sites, but lab Web sites funded by NRC. These are considered NRC web sites by the agency (We do not mark them with exit signs on the external site). These sites should be treated as part of nrc.gov and their sponsors should be instructed to screen them for sensitive material. I'm going to have my staff draft a memo to offices who sponsor these sites to remind them of this responsibility.

If questionable material is found on other Web sites, people can notify Walt Oliu and we will send them a boiler plate e-mail advising them of the situation and asking them to consider removing the material.

NMSS release

Eileen, what criteria has the agency issued for staff to advise others to follow to withdraw documents from non-NRC websites? We need to be consistent, as well as clear, to all licensees, vendors of regulated products (such as transportation and storage casks), and other federal or state agencies on information to remove from their websites.
