Dear Mr. Crane:

In January 2003, the Region I Field Office of the NRC Office of Investigations (OI) initiated an investigation (1-2003-008) to determine if several AmerGen employees were discriminated against for engaging in protected activity. Specifically, it had been asserted that several training department employees were disciplined in December 2002 for raising concerns internally about TMI's operator training program.

As background, a conclusion was made in October 2002 via an internal Exelon assessment of initial license training at TMI by the Mid Atlantic Regional Oversight Group (MAROG) that it may be difficult to prepare the then-current SRO class for the February 2003 NRC license exam. As a result of this MAROG conclusion, the TMI Site VP asked that a follow-up root cause assessment be performed. Several training department employees asked and were permitted to participate in the MAROG assessment and follow-up. These employees raised concerns about inadequacies in the operator training program, and resources and administrative support needed to effectively implement the program per Exelon training program guidance. In December 2002, disciplinary warnings were issued to these employees for instructing students with material that was not prepared in accordance with the Exelon Training Program. Discrimination complaints were subsequently submitted to the Employee Concerns Program (ECP). In late February 2003, ECP concluded that these individuals were treated unfairly and recommended revocation of the disciplinary warnings, because the employees had been told, or were given the perception, that they could be candid during the MAROG review and that this would not result in disciplinary action. However, ECP concluded that the unfair treatment was not representative of discrimination related to 10 CFR 50.7 (the NRC employee protection regulation) because of the administrative nature of the problem and also because no training inadequacies were identified that impacted nuclear safety. As a result of the ECP findings, the disciplinary warnings were removed.

Based on the evidence developed during this investigation, OI did not substantiate that these employees were discriminated against for engaging in protected activity.
