I have already discussed this with Garrett Smith and others, more than a month ago. In fact, the enclosure is marked for internal distribution only (see the "real" version, not the e-mail pop-up version).

FYI - your call

See the attached info that was identified as the type of sensitive information an NMSS/FCSS staff member thought should be considered for withholding from release to the public.

I agree that this would be considered the type of sensitive information that we would consider for withholding from release to the public.

I believe it fits:

SRM -01-0030 new criteria 22, "...status or configuration of systems and equipment that could be used to determine facility vulnerabilities", and

Sensitive Homeland Security Information draft definition criteria 2, "... viable assessment, ... or estimate of the security vulnerability of any element of the critical infrastructure ... including ... vulnerability assessments, risk evaluation, risk-management planning"

Fritz,

Please look at this, and let Barry know what you think (in light of the new potential guidance).

Thanks,
Pat
