Tom, did anything more happen on this?

Ms. Judd of the Pennfield Library feels the NRC should be more proactive in restricting access to the 48X microfiche collections in the former LPDR's. I have discussed the issue of access to the 48X microfiche collections on two occasions: 10/25/01 and today. Her main fear is that the contents of the fiche collections will get into the hands of terrorists who will then use the information against Americans.

I told her previously and today that we are working on reviewing documents, that GPO will be the organizational unit to instruct the former LPDR's that are Federal Depository Program Libraries on what documents to restrict in their collections. Of all the librarians I talked to she is perhaps the most insistent that the NRC do something. As it now stands, she is going to move her collection to a secure area and call the PDR when there is request from her users. Yet, she wants more.
