

p w/h - 0010

From: Rod Warren <rodlaser@uclink4.berkeley.edu>
To: <nrcweb@nrc.gov>
Date: Tue, Oct 30, 2001 4:46 PM
Subject: Stop messing around with the website and restore access to needed information

Hi,

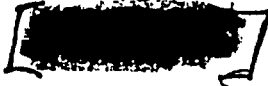

I am getting a little annoyed with this protracted closure of the NRC website. I don't mind that the NRC wants to perform a security review of the material. But, many items, Reg Guides, Nuregs, HP position papers, ect., are not dangerous to the national security. Even a cursory glance at many titles is enough to cause a resonable person to realize that the associated document is safe to repost for general access (reg guide 8.13 heh?). Let's stop the grandstanding, shall we?

I could point out that these documents are not classified or copy righted. Anyone can post them. If you don't get with it, I am seriously considering establishing an alt.nrc website and posting these documents. Like most professional HPs, I keep a number of these documents in electronic form. I'll bet I could gather up a sizable fraction of the NRC website by just asked for contributions of e-documents from radsafe, AMRSO, ect.

Come on, lets get with it.

Rod Warren

rodlaser@uclink4.berkeley.edu

Ex. 6

'GGG-9