Dear Dr. LeVan:

Thank you so much for the two invitations extended in your letter of May 13, 2004; first, for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (USNRC) to co-sponsor with your foundation and others the workshop and training course on "Practical Applications of Ionizing Radiation in Radiation Medicine," to be presented in Ho Chi Minh City the week of August 2 and in Hanoi the week of August 9, and, second, for me to personally address either or both of the workshop's opening sessions. I regret to inform you that, because of other, already-agreed international commitments and resource limitations as we near the end of our fiscal year, the USNRC and I must both decline your invitations to become involved or to participate this time.

Please be assured that we continue to be interested in Vietnam as it considers a commitment to nuclear power. I hope that you will think of us again, particularly as new workshops and training courses focus on nuclear safety, security, and emergency preparedness, the primary areas of our expertise. May you have good luck and much success with your sessions next month.

Sincerely,
