- The federal No Child Left Behind (NCLB) act is intended to hold both states and schools more accountable for student results by instituting requirements on academic growth, student assessments, teacher qualifications, and annual local report cards.
- NCLB requires all districts and schools receiving Title I funds to meet state "adequate yearly progress" (AYP) goals for their total student populations and for specified demographic subgroups, including major ethnic/racial groups, economically disadvantaged students, limited English proficient (LEP) students, and students with disabilities.
- If a school fails to meet AYP goals for two or more years, it is classified as a school in need of improvement and faces

State approved supplemental service providers

Under No Child Left Behind, supplemental education services, which include tutoring or other extra education services that provide academic aid to students, must be made available to students in Title I schools that have been in need of improvement for more than a year. Parents can choose from a list of state-approved supplemental service providers (SSPs), which are generally available on state Department of Education Web sites.
