thanks, Dan. perceptive read....

As we discussed, we can address the context if questioned about it.

Overall, this is very close to "as good as it gets" in terms of reporters understanding and clearly relating what happened.

In another e-mail I forwarded from PSEG's intranet all the local newspaper articles on last Thursday's meeting. All the articles seem to be accurate except for one statement in the first article, "Utility Promises Nuclear Reforms" from the Courier Post. In the last two-thirds of the article it states:

Hubert J. Miller, regional NRC administrator, said he expects the work environment turnaround to take time, noting that current problems are the "legacy" of past management. He said there is no need to consider sanctions, such as shutting the plants down.

Alone, that last sentence could be taken out of context.
