

B. The NJTTF asks that all requests for name checks or other information be limited to those databases that will logically provide the information needed. A careful choice of appropriate, case-related databases will result in quick responses. Requesters are encouraged to work with the appropriate representatives at their local JTTF before contacting the NJTTF.

C. All requests for name checks should be forwarded to the NJTTF via electronic communication (EC). Time-sensitive requests can be called in or forwarded via GroupWise e-mail (the database listing does include telephone numbers).

28. UNITED STATES NUCLEAR REGULATORY COMMISSION (NRC)

DATABASE:

- Personnel Access Data System (PADS) - a database for U.S. nuclear power plant workers with unescorted access; includes all workers, as of July 2003, granted access to the protected area of a nuclear licensee site and includes as well those workers who have been denied unescorted access to said site during the past five years. PADS includes demographic information on a person (name, DOB, SSN), training information, dates of completion of essential elements related to the requirements for unescorted access, and radiation exposure information collected by the licensee as part of the access authorization process, along with the dates of access at each licensee site where access was granted. The database also includes "flagging" criteria to alert a downstream licensee of a condition which is a potentially granting licensee would need to evaluate prior to the decision to further grant access. NOTE: NRC has access to PADS through the Nuclear Energy Institute (NEI) and/or a licensee. Both are members of the private industry sector and are not U.S. government agencies. Name checks can be run without giving a reason; however, names to be checked have to be passed to an individual who does not have a security clearance.
