Subject: uranium plant workers

Ive read that in Paducah Ky when a worker there got sick, the government would have up to a dozen lawyers fighting their disability claims. The sick person might have one, and not able to keep him for very long at that. These were decent hard working people who just had the misfortune of getting sick at work. Some of the people died hard.

So Ive sent records and emails that you state guys and feds have been so good about sending to me to various lawyers and ins companies. They have your names and names of other government officials on them. So if that plant gets licensed and if someone working there gets sick, and the state and federal government trot out a platoon of lawyers to get their claim tossed, it might just be a little harder this time. The same for the people down wind.
