Region III

- (Update) On February 8, Region III staff attended a contentious and heated public meeting at the Village of Godley, Illinois (near Braidwood Station), to discuss tritium contamination in groundwater. The meeting was widely attended (approx 300 attendees), including members of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency (IEPA), media, local/state/federal officials (or staffers), and anti-nuclear activists. Region III and the Illinois EPA communicated the position that the public is safe.
