

REPORT OF INTERVIEW
KYMN HARVIN

On September 29, 2003, Kymn HARVIN was met at her place of employment, Gregg Conference Center, Suite 332, at American College, 270 S. Bryn Mawr Avenue in Bryn Mawr, PA 19010 by the reporting agent. She provided eleven disks of information she removed from a PSEG laptop that she retained after she left in March 2003. She claimed that completed the information from the laptop that she wanted to provide to the NRC.

She reported that at the time she switched from being a PSEG corporate employee to PSEG Nuclear, [REDACTED] indicated to her "casually" that he was "bringing you on board." She had the understanding that this was permanent employment, but it was not documented. There was an e-mail between [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] to whom she formerly reported at corporate, transferring her to PSEG Nuclear; she was not sure of the date and she did not have access to this after February-March 2003. This was a change from when [REDACTED] would request her services from corporate from one year to the next. Other indications to her that this was not temporary were that there was no rotation assignment agreement in place and she was then disconnected from corporate in terms of mail and other notifications. She did not sign anything that limited her length of employment. Both [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] told her they were not aware of any fixed term for her employment. She believes it is possible that [REDACTED] was told something different than what the others were by [REDACTED].

Her Cultural Change Manager position with PSEG Nuclear was salaried at [REDACTED]. After her position was terminated, [REDACTED] advised her that he was willing to consider her for the Training Manager position. She then found out that position was frozen until new [REDACTED] was in place. [REDACTED] closed this issue then. After she advised HR that positions were frozen at the site, previously unknown information to [REDACTED] returned to HARVIN with an offer for a Client Consultant job, a corporate position. The position paid approximately [REDACTED] salary and was a "giant step backwards" in her career. She was advised by [REDACTED] of RIGHT CONSULTANTS not to accept this position because of how it would appear on her resume.

HARVIN suspects the company will claim they were planning to remove her and her safety concerns were irrelevant.
