To whom this may concern {i.e., those in favor of nuclear power},

My dear friend and fellow classmate Natalie Garber sent me a letter talking about how there is all of a sudden a need for nuclear energy, and how it has been labeled a "safe" alternative for our future power supply. This is really disturbing to me, because that's just it: nuclear and safe do not go together...I'd like to meet the genius/impatient person who came up with this ridiculous notion. I mean, what in the world are we going to do with all of our waste? Bury it, so it just may leak into our natural environment, causing a whole chain effect of problems: no more natural food, no more farms, no more breathing the air which would be full of pollutants and chemicals, having to stay inside when it rains because the rain is so toxic that it would take your skin right off, future children born mutated/deformed/messed up...you get the picture. What if a plane were to crash into a nuclear site? What would happen then?

I honestly would love to see the people in charge just sit back and really think: consider the damage that will be created, and how they could come up with much more efficient/better solutions, like giant wind turbines or solar energy plants.

I am all for creating better energy solutions, and would love to see our nation come up with a plan. Nuclear power seems all great for now, but why risk it? Why not do something that will save lives and save money?

So, I've said my peace, and I hope that my comment helps with this current situation.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
