Subject: Please don't expand nuclear capacity at Vogtle

I am a Georgia resident who has been concerned for a long time about the risks of nuclear power. The history of this industry shows clearly that it is a deadend road.

1. Though utility companies have pocketed millions in profits, nuclear energy has cost taxpayers billions in public subsidies, and shows no sign of becoming self-supporting in the future.
2. Homeland Security and the "War on Terror" have done almost nothing to protect vulnerable nuclear power plants from terrorist attack -- and in fact, very little can be done.
3. Fifty years after the nuclear power industry began, there is still no viable way to dispose of nuclear waste, and the non-viable methods that have been seriously proposed endanger us all -- even transporting this waste is dangerous.
4. Even without a major meltdown or accident, the routine production of nuclear energy poisons the environment, particularly in the mining of uranium, and the use of river water for cooling is destructive to river ecosystems and wasteful of a resource that is even more essential than energy.
5. The supply of raw materials for nuclear fuels is limited, even if we sacrifice the natural areas where they are found, making them a poor replacement for fossil fuels; production of nuclear fuels from nuclear wastes requires transporting them through populated areas, making a radioactive accident more likely.

Please drop the idea of meeting our energy deficit with this expensive, dangerous, deadend technology and begin focusing on energy conservation instead. Conservation has created more energy than nuclear and has the potential to create much more, as other nations have already proven.

Thank you.
