I oppose the construction of an irradiation facility in Hawaii because there has been no environmental impact statement done. In such a setting as Hawaii, in the case of an accident, to where will the population be moved? How will a response to an accident of spilled or lost radioactive material be addressed?

Furthermore, time after time, American consumers have strongly and firmly rejected the irradiation of our food and refuse to buy it when we are aware that it is irradiated. Just because irradiated food has been sereptitiously foisted on the American public does not mean that it is either accepted or desired. When irradiated food finds its way into our pantries and bodies, it is because the fact of its irradiation has been concealed from us. We have rejected this form of food processing in the past and we reject still.

Sincerely,
Helen Kopp
