December 28, 2007 is right around the corner. It is possible that this corner is not on your block, but it is on mine, along with the people of the State of Georgia.

December 28, 2007 is right around the corner and a "regulated riparian" system of water management is long overdue. The extreme waste of 43 million gallons a day at Plant Vogtle and the "Western Water Law" which allows water to be owned, bought and sold will not enhance the quality of life for all citizens, destroys natural systems and public health, and does not support the states economy by managing water resources in a sustainable manner. Also, approval of an "early site permit" for Georgia Utilities will supply thier new reactors with tens of millions of gallons of water, above and beyond the tens of millions. Plant Vogtle is all ready pulling from the Savannah River.

There is no excuse for this type of environmental and social abuse. Please consider the Georgia Water Coalitions plan for a true Statewide Water Management Plan. A plan that unites the everyone in the State of Georgia with one vision and one set of principles.

The draft plan can be found at www.georgiawaterplan.org.

All Georgians ultimately drink from the same waters; we must plan the use of those resources together.
