Insert personal comments here: : Nuclear materials are inherently dangerous, and are a target for terrorism and accidental radioactive emissions. I know this because my father in law was a health and safety inspector for the NRC, and was a manager of the Hanford Plant in Richland, Washington, during its earliest years. He died at age 63, of leukemia.

The whole nuclear power industry, in my view, should be shut down. The industry cannot function under the normal rules of capitalism. It requires massive government subsidies of taxpayer funds to continue, including release from liability. If left to itself in the private sector, this industry would already be dead and buried.

Let's not subject Utahns to any further exposure to the danger created by storing nuclear waste. People throughout the American West and across the nation have suffered too much already from increased levels of radioactivity resulting from bomb and weapons testing, and releases from nuclear power plants. It's time to move our nation toward truly clean energy, from sources such as wind, solar, geothermal and other renewables. We must also take serious steps to develop robust increases in energy efficiency and conservation. And, above all, its time to reduce and eliminate America's military obsession with nuclear weapons. The world's people neither need or want this paranoid affliction.
