NRC INFORMATION NOTICE NO. 85-35, SUPPLEMENT 1: FAILURE OF AIR CHECK
VALVES TO SEAT

Addressees:

All holders of operating licenses or construction permits for nuclear power reactors.

Purpose:

This information notice is being provided to alert addressees to potential problems resulting from failures in instrument air system check valves intended to isolate safety-related air accumulators under accident conditions. It is expected that recipients will review the information for applicability to their facilities and consider actions, as appropriate, to avoid similar problems. However, suggestions contained in this information notice do not constitute NRC requirements; therefore, no specific action or written response is required.

Description of Circumstances:

In December 1985 the NRC staff conducted a safety systems outage modification inspection (SSOMI) at Fort Calhoun Station, Unit 1. As a result of the escalated enforcement action following the SSOMI, the licensee committed to test air check valves associated with the safety-related air accumulators that provide air for various control valves and instruments on loss of the instrument air system. On April 15, 1988, as a result of check valve testing, the licensee found excessive leakage past four accumulator check valves in the air bubbler instrumentation used for initiation of the recirculation actuation signal (RAS). The valves had not been previously tested or included in the plant surveillance program. The licensee found that the check valves were not designed for air service and replaced them with soft-seat, spring-loaded valves.

Discussion:

At Fort Calhoun the level in the safety injection and refueling water tank (SIRWT) is determined from the pressure in six air bubbler lines that extend to the bottom of the SIRWT. Two of the lines provide control room indication of level along with high/low level alarms. Four of the lines are used in two-out-of-four logic circuitry to provide input into the recirculation actuation signal. This signal provides automatic emergency core cooling system (ECCS) pump suction switchover from the SIRWT to the sump on low SIRWT level. The instrument air system supplying all air bubbler lines is not safety-related, seismically qualified or supplied with vital power.

NOTICE 85-035

The four lines that provide for automatic ECCS switchover are provided with safety-related accumulators designed to maintain air pressure following design-basis events for which instrument air is assumed to be lost. Check valves separate each of the four accumulators from the instrument air system. Failure of these check valves would cause the accumulators to fully or partially discharge through the instrument air system if instrument air pressure was lost. Loss of accumulator air could cause a premature switchover of the ECCS and containment spray pumps following a loss-of-coolant accident. If premature switchover occurred, the containment sump might be dry or might have an inadequate water level to provide net positive suction pressure to the pumps during a design basis event. This could lead to damage of the pumps and their subsequent unavailability. The RAS initiation also secures the low pressure injection pumps and isolates the miniflow recirculation lines for the SI pumps back to the SIRWT. In addition, control room indication of SIRWT level would not be available if the instrument air pressure were lost since these bubblers do not have air accumulators.

Although the specific event described here occurred on a pressurized water reactor, failure of air check valves to seat when required to ensure availability of air from safety-related accumulators could be a problem on any type reactor.

No specific action or written response is required by this information notice. If you have any questions about this matter, please contact the technical contact listed below or the Regional Administrator of the appropriate regional office.
