Dear Receiver —

March 18, 2009

I am unable to express the horror I feel when word comes that the US wants to build/update through expansion more nuclear reactors. No mother would do such a thing knowing that future generations will have to deal with our lack of taking responsibility for what we are creating, the possible nuclear accident. We don't know what to do with the highly radioactive spent fuel except to tip bombs, thus destroying people and planet. The hope that something somewhere will contain the nuclear waste is a pipe dream until it becomes a reality. I beg you to put on hold further nuclear reactors until s' if a safe storage for millions of years can be invented or found. Otherwise we are foisting on the future our recklessness and lack of care & responsibility.

This is an issue women know more about than men. It's time to listen to our voices. The well-being of the planet is of far greater ^{importance} than the greed of a few.

Thank you —
