General Comment

whereas public evacuation time estimates should be updated periodically, it is an extra duty for emergency director (shift manager) to define evacuation routes and categorize which section evacuates 1st, 2nd, etc. Let state/counties have control of evacuation implementation. In some low population areas, it would be a waste of emergency director's time, when s/he could be doing something to mitigate event. In some higher population areas, maybe emergency director/shift manager would chose to recommend evacuation priorities. Since state/counties implement evacuation, let them decide what works best for them. They are capable of evacuating for hurricanes and have learned from those events.

Van,

Attached for docketing is a comment letter from Kathy Hougan on the above noted proposed rule (PR 50/52; 74 FR 23253) that I received via the regulations.gov website on September 9, 2009.

Thanks,
Carol
