Sallisaw - Sequoyah's Home Site
Sequoyah, the Cherokee soldier and teacher, gained worldwide fame when he devised the Cherokee syllabary. His statue is in the Nation's Capitol as one of Oklahoma's two greatest men. The giant redwood trees of California are named for him.

"AMERICAN OWNED"

GREEN COUNTRY

In Green Country you can take a trip down memory lane by way of historic Route 66. The "Mother Road" cuts through the heart of Green Country, and lets you get your kicks visiting museums, neon diners, one-of-a-kind art deco structures, totem poles, flowing rivers, small town treasures and big city excitement.

The past comes to life in Green Country at the Woolaroc Museum, Ranch and Wildlife Preserve, a living monument to the American West where buffalo and other wildlife roam and natural history plays out through art and artifacts. You'll also find the West abundantly displayed at the Gilcrease Museum, and the whole world of art awaits you at The Philbrook Museum of Art.

Route 66 is just one road among hundreds that wind their way to special places in Green Country. There are roads that span the mountain tops on the Talimena Drive, lead to the Tall Grass Prairie and flow from the Ozark Hills. Roads that lead to tepees, log cabins, secluded fishing holes, dreamy bed and breakfast cottages, antique shopping and tribal capitals for Cherokee, Creek and Osage Indians. Best of all, in Green Country, are the roads least traveled. The roads that lead to only a little peace and relaxation.
