I discussed whether we should have any final public meeting regarding Shieldalloy with my Decommissioning Counterparts last week. As of this time, since they had a public meeting last September, 30th, and informed the public regarding New Jersey's likely assumption of regulatory authority for Shieldalloy as of this coming Oct. 1, no further public meetings were planned.

After the Shieldalloy DP and EIS meetings back in late 2006, I suggested putting all historical Shieldalloy documents into ADAMS. Trish and John K. and the admin staff accomplished that major effort. In speaking with the FSME project manager, he indicated that as far as he is aware, all documents that have recently been received (last many years) relative to Shieldalloy, have been going into ADAMS. It looks like we have virtual 100% ADAMS accessibility of Shieldalloy documents. He indicated that he will look over what he and his colleagues have in HQ to make sure. Bottomline, because of the MAGIC of ADAMS, there should not be any need to copy files from here or transfer files from HQ. We should just be able to send them our files. Since I am a bit of a packrat, I'll likely retain some minimal info in Shieldalloy.

I mentioned that you said we have no open inspections or public meetings scheduled for Shield Alloy to Kinneman and asked Kinneman how we can proceed with the NJ Agreement State transfer. He suggested that we keep a copy of the latest license and any other pertinent paperwork you feel is important and/or useful.

But since 90% of the documents are in ADAMS - we (really you) can start organizing them. Kinneman doesn't feel we need to make Xerox copies of everything. He did suggest we (really you) contact HQ to coordinate this transition and make arrangements to transfer the HQ files when HQ is done with them.
