The licensee sent in an amendment to add an authorized user to their license. The licensee submitted board certification from the American Board of Radiology. According to the regulations, the certificates issued from the American Board of Radiology from June 2006 forward should also have "AU Eligible" above the seal on the certificate. It was not clear on the certificate that the licensee submitted if "AU eligible" was written above the seal. I contacted the RSO to inquire if the certificate did in fact have the wording above the seal and may not have come through on the copy. I also informed him that if the certificate did not have the required print then they should submit training and experience for the proposed AU. The RSO stated that he would get the certificate again to ensure the wording was on there and resend it or submit training and experience if necessary.
