Dear Mr. Meck,

I am writing to express my concern over the proposed RSM radiation exposure standards. I think that I represent a large segment of the public when I say that I am very wary of the dangers of allowing the smelting of radioactively contaminated scrap metal with regular scrap for the production of consumer goods. The EPA has stated that there is no level of RSM exposure which can be said to pose no risk. Needless to say, this is a little alarming and I am sure there would be a very bitter public outcry if any standards were approved. Recent news of cesium clouds poisoning Spain make me especially eager to urge you to scrap this plan. Thank you for your time, I am,

Sincerely yours,
Nora Olsen
