To whom it may concern,

I know the intent of the current "Work Hour Rules" was a good one, but I would have to say they are, for the most part, a failure.

Everyone handles physical and emotional stress differently. Some people work overtime and feel little to no effect from the extra hours whatsoever. Others tend to avoid any extra time at work at all, for various reasons. For Operations as a whole, it always worked itself out in the past. Whatever the case may be, the "Work Hour Rules" we are currently held to have caused the complete opposite result of what they were intended to do. We now have a lot more people here beyond their normal hours who do not want to be here than we did before. Like it or not, this has a detrimental effect on an individual which then indirectly affects their work. Certainly this was not the intent of the rules.

The rules we used before may not have been perfect, but we understood them, they were manageable, and we knew how to make them correspond with our lives.

Please consider revising the current "Work Hour Rules" or eliminate them entirely.

Thank you,

Tim Boyle
