

In the Matter of: Entergy Nuclear Operations, Inc.
(Indian Point Nuclear Generating Units 2 and 3)

ASLBP #: 07-858-03-LR-BD01
Docket #: 05000247 | 05000286
Exhibit #: ENT000469-00-BD01
Admitted: 10/15/2012
Rejected:
Other:
Identified: 10/15/2012
Withdrawn:
Stricken:

ENT000469
Submitted: March 30, 2012

PropertyShark BlogCenter

Market Reports for Real Estate Writers

Subscribe to PropertyShark BlogCenter

- Newsreader
- Google Reader
- Technorati Favorites
- My Yahoo!
- Newsgator
- Rojo
- Netvibes
- Bloglines
- Home
- Market Reports
- Contact PropertyShark PR
- Property Search

Go

Average Home Sizes in Washington D.C., Atlanta Twice As Much as in New York

2 Comments By calin on January 4th, 2012

For many the 'center of the universe', New York with its world-class restaurants, museums, fashion, and art is a place lots of people are willing to pay a fortune to call home. Despite the stratospheric prices New Yorkers pay for their homes, especially in Manhattan, there is a downside – less than generous living spaces.

While it's no secret that average homes in New York tend to be smaller than in other large cities in the U.S., we went a step further and compiled a list of 20 major US cities by average home size. Somewhat unsurprisingly New York City is at the bottom of the list.

The average sized home in NYC: a 2-bedroom apartment of 1,124 square feet. Interior Photos courtesy of Corcoran

The average home in New York City (all the five boroughs) is 1,124 square feet, which places the Big Apple at the bottom of the list of 20 cities in the U.S. Home owners in Washington D.C. and Atlanta enjoy almost twice as much space as New Yorkers. Californians don't have it bad either, as an average home in Los Angeles boasts no less than 1,895 square feet.

And talking about Californians, home owners in posh areas like Beverly Hills and Malibu are in a league of their own when it comes to home sizes (and prices!). An average home in Beverly Hills is 3,884 square feet, more than twice the size of one in the City of Los Angeles, while a home in Malibu is on average 2,998 square feet.

The same can not be said about New York – while a home in Manhattan, New York's most expensive borough, costs twice as much as one in Brooklyn and almost four times more than one in the Bronx, the average home size in Manhattan (1,226 square foot) is not significantly larger than the average in the outer boroughs.

City	Average Home Size
Washington D.C.	2,237 sqft
Atlanta	2,074 sqft
Austin	1,979 sqft
Seattle (King County)	1,899 sqft
Los Angeles	1,895 sqft
Las Vegas	1,874 sqft
Houston	1,873 sqft
Memphis	1,750 sqft
Miami	1,646 sqft
Phoenix	1,644 sqft
Indianapolis	1,584 sqft
Oklahoma City	1,493 sqft
San Francisco	1,475 sqft
Chicago	1,417 sqft
Cleveland	1,377 sqft
Dallas	1,363 sqft
Denver	1,354 sqft
Baltimore	1,260 sqft
Boston	1,250 sqft
New York City	1,124 sqft

Note: For the purpose of this report, a home is defined as a single-unit residential property (single-family home, co-op or condominium). In the case of Chicago, there's no public information about the square footage of condo apartments. To overcome this issue we have used an estimate based on the apartments that are currently for sale in the city.

Share on Facebook