Oh-Dearest Commission:

I hope to get your attention for a few un-deniably ever-so-critically panic stricken moments. The nuclear Waste Management Denial (henceforth referred to as WMD) that is haunting this planet and especially the lawmakers of this country has twisted my heart into a very painful knot that is threatening my very human soul and shaking me to the core. I repeatedly have to catch myself from not abandoning my faith in the human race and its capacity for making the right decisions for a peaceful and healthy future for all.

I realize that denial is a very complicated situation that sounds simpler to overcome than it actually is. Denial is something that we typically cannot work though on our own because of all the emotional turmoil that stands in the way of seeing it clearly. But my confidence decision is based on the hope that one day in the VERY NEAR future we will find a way to deposit this denial in safe place where we will never have to face its ugly face again!

So based on the fact that I'm not a close friend or clergy, but a very concerned citizen and supporter of a healthy future for all of us, I offer my unabridged assistance when you need it the most. This wacky issue surrounding the nuclear waste and its safe management must be looked at square on and with only your heart as the determining factor. Any practical approach suggesting future use of waste as another fuel source is utterly ludicrous and the idea that we one day will have a perfect solution to an impossible situation is just as improbable. The time has come to look deep inside your human core and ask what to do. This is not a matter of technical mumbo jumbo or political wrangling, but a dire need for a decision that is connected to the future generations that we have a great responsibility for. It is time to stand strong and to be courageous and realize that this nuclear train left the station and we have let it run to fast and too long for too many years and somebody (hint-hint!) will have to muster the will and the power to stop this train dead in its tracks and bring an end to this madness. A commission as yours was created by the government for the benefit of the people (the many) and not the industry (the few) and it is time to realize that the many will eventually convince the few of their erroneous ways and accomplice what is needed for our survival.

I implore you to stand up to the greedy and power hungry nuclear industry and make this the biggest turn around in human history and leave this nuclear folly a thing of the past and the solution a proud story for the future history books.

Yours respectfully, kindly, deplorably, desperately and kindly

Ole P. Sorensen (Father, Earth lover, visionary and human supporter.)
