Dear Ms. Macfarlane,

From one 'Top 100' to another, congratulations!

The recognition of Loyola University Chicago as one of Chicago's best places to work speaks highly of your commitment to leading with value and purpose – something we share at Loyola University Chicago.

In fact, as the nation's largest Jesuit, Catholic university, we know very well what it takes to achieve this level of success. The promise we make to our students is that we are educating them to lead extraordinary lives. Central to this effort is working with them to determine their professional goals and give them the education they will need to be successful in their chosen fields.

I am writing to you to ask you to consider partnering with us at Loyola in creating internship and employment opportunities for our students through career fairs and other collaborative arenas. Our students are bright, motivated, and very interested in gaining real-world experience in the workforce that will offer them both an opportunity to contribute their skills and talents as well as to help them make informed career choices.

In order to advance this potential partnership, Loyola's Employer Relations Coordinator, Marty Gahbauer (773-508-2895 and mgahbauer@luc.edu), will follow up with your human resources department about any forthcoming opportunities.

Thank you very much for your consideration of this invitation and best wishes for a successful 2013.

Sincerely,

Michael J. Garanzini, S.J.
President and CEO
