General Comment

To whom it may concern,

Albert Einstein observed that nuclear fission is a hell of a way to boil water. Even he could not have imagined the hell about to wreak havoc on the northern hemisphere from Fukushima (actually, it already is). How irresponsible we have been in creating nuclear waste without having a means of its safe disposal. Perhaps once northern Japan becomes too dangerous for human occupation, it could be used for worldwide nuclear waste disposal. I have no confidence that you will come up with a better idea.
