Hi Marv,

I'm glad you joined the formal protest of the lack of access to these 'public' meetings. I've also requested public access via a microphone feed, teleconference, or video be made available in the future..

According to the contact who was not stricken with illness, Robert Hardies, they were expecting over 100 attendees, "including various members of the public," and some 32 technical presentations on materials degradation topics.

I have requested that he send a list of the presentations' access numbers once they are posted for ADAMS searches, since we all know how reliable ADAMS is for pulling up precise results.

Marv, I agree with you that the public was shut out of these meetings, but will send you the list of search numbers as soon as they arrive.

Best wishes,
Gretel

Friends,
T his is the latest ploy to keep me off important public meetings.
HELP!
I DO not know how to create and send to lists.

Subject: Your Telephone Call

Mr. Lewis,

Please accept my apology for not responding to you sooner. However, I have been down with a stomach virus the past two days and was not at work or even trying to work from home. As such, I did not hear your two voicemails until just a few minutes ago.

In your call you requested that to participate in the three-day, annual materials meeting and subsequently requested a hardcopy of the presentations. Because of the large size of the meeting, it was decided that having a teleconference capability would be ineffective. Thus, the NRC staff has not established a telephone bridge line for this meeting.

However, I will ensure that you are distribution for the minutes for the meeting when they are issues and will also make sure you know the ADAMS Accession No. for the presentations. This information will provide you with a record of the meeting and provide you access to all the presentations.

Again, please accept my apology for not getting back to you sooner but this is the first day I am back to work.
