

BARLEY BARBER SWAMP

Home

About

Visit

Gallery

Get Involved

A well-known tourist destination forced to close following the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, the Barley Barber Swamp is once again inviting the public to get a glimpse of the stunning 400-acre, old-growth cypress community.

Located in Western Martin County, the area is teeming with plant and wildlife species—most notably, its ancient bald cypress trees, including one of the largest in the United States.

So as you follow our meandering boardwalk and explore this pristine, freshwater wetland, take a moment to absorb the beauty of the unique ecological treasure that is the Barley Barber Swamp.

Treasured Lands FOUNDATION

HOME

ABOUT

VISIT

GALLERY

GET INVOLVED

Computer Support and WebSite Design: In-Site Technologies LLC