Dear Secretary,

The NRC should reject the three petitions for rulemaking cited in the subject line. The agency should not even have accepted them for public comment in the first place, as they are frivolous and based on unsound science.

This takes us back to the "Let's all breathe some radon in a uranium mine for the natural health benefit to our lungs." That was sure a good idea! Lots of health professionals really went for it. Sure, some called them quacks ...

The natural conclusion to the hormesis claim is that we will be lining up with our babies for their "healthy baby dose." Maybe hospitals and birthing centers will give a quick dose right after birth, just to get the infant off to the best possible start? And then every healthy baby visit will have a booster - just a low level, of course.

Finally, who are the proponents of this? Do they start their mornings with just a little hit of artificial tanning, finished off with just a teaspoon of liquid intake - a fine mix of dissolved isotopes? Just to stimulate the body, inside and out? Did they zap their own babies on this altar, or are they only willing to zap other people's?

Any changes to radiation regulations contemplated by the NRC should be in the direction of furthering limiting doses.
