Pursuant to the Federal Civil Penalties Inflation Adjustment Act of 1990 and the Debt Collection Improvement Act of 1996, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission must review and adjust for inflation (if appropriate) its civil monetary penalties every 4 years. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission plans to conduct this review and potential rulemaking by direct final rule by the end of Fiscal Year 2016.
Justification
This rule scores 23 points (14, 2, 7, 0) because of the following reasons: A) Moderate contributor to the safety objective (strategy 4) and security objective 1 (strategy 2); B) Indirect contributor to the regulatory effectiveness strategy (strategy 2d); C) Congressional direction and schedule; and D) No contribution toward any considerations.
