Dear Mr. Lodhi:

Advanced GeoServices Corp. has exchanged our Troxler model 3440 nuclear gauges for the newer Model 4590 E-gauges. These newer models use much less radioactive material and are not subject to requirements such as licensing, radiation safety program documentation, etc. See the attached documents for further details.

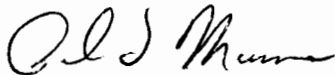

We have transferred ownership of our old gauges to Troxler and have returned them. (See the attached receipt letter from Troxler).

As we no longer possess quantities of radioactive materials that require licensing, we request that you terminate our USNRC License No. 37-28800-01.

If you have any questions regarding this issue, please contact me at (610) 840-9142 or at pmarano@advancedgeoservices.com.

Sincerely,

ADVANCED GEOSERVICES CORP.

Reference: Troxler Model 4590, EGauge, exempt status

Dear Troxler customer,

Thank you for your interest in the new Troxler soil density gauge, Model 4590, EGauge.

We are very excited that this gauge has been granted the exempt status by the US Nuclear Regulatory Commission. This means that it can be distributed to customers who do not have a radioactive materials license in the United States. No radioactive materials license means no license application, no radiation safety program documentation, no inspections and no fees. There is no requirement for operator safety training, TLD badges or special shipping paperwork. It can be used in any state or on Federal land with no special permission from the licensing agency (no reciprocity needed to cross state lines). There are some labels that are required on the shipping case when shipped by a common carrier and a short Hazmat training course (offered online) is also required periodically. With an annual calibration and basic maintenance the EGauge is sure to be as reliable and easy to use as Troxler's nuclear gauges have been for over 50 years.

The link below will take you to Troxler's Materials license for this gauge showing that the NRC has granted the exempt status and that it can be distributed to customers who do not hold a radioactive materials license.

Sincerely,
Robyn Myers
