Attachment: As stated

1 of Texas, the UIC program has worked quite well and its 2 regulatory program for the -- what we would call the ore
3 zone and its restoration. However, we found -- and 4 regulatorily, we would want to pay attention to an uppermost
5 offer for in some cases there might be a portion of the 6 sedimentary column that would not be looked at by the UIC
7 program, and according to -- looking at some of the surface
8 activities of the licensee, there may be impacts to that 9 that I think would be well covered by the regulatory agency
10 and the licensee separate and apart from the UIC program.

11 The issue about in situ leach programs, we would 12 agree with the option to have all the liquid effluents
13 treated as 11e.(2) material, primarily for the reason that 14 benefit or alteration of material for its ultimate use
15 really starts in the ore body when the uranium is oxidized
16 and removed from the surface of the sand grains and is then 17 transported by the flow of the lixiviant to the surface
18 facility. This process also mobilizes a lot of other 19 metals, and in particular radium-2 which make the liquid
20 itself a byproduct material. And that is, in fact, the way
21 we have mostly treated it in Texas in our program.

22 I realize I have shot through that pretty quickly, 23 but I think that is essentially the points that we would 24 like to bring up.
