"The Boulder Zone has 'two features that should scare the heck out of everybody,' said South Miami Mayor Philip Stoddard. 'The first is a feature called 'Karst collapse,' which is when the ceiling falls in, creating a conical depression with hole in it, where water can pass upwards into the upper Floridan Aquifer. The second is vertical fault lines, where water can migrate up into places that can get to us."

Please help protect the Upper Floridian Aquifer, our water supply, and our national parks!
