General Comment

I have had two radioactive iodine treatments over the last 5 years. Each time I chose to spend the 3 days in isolation at the hospital. I made this choice mainly because I did not want to expose my husband to the radiation. Also if any problems should occur I would be able to have immediate medical help. Once you are home you still have several days that you must keep everything separate from others, These, include sleeping by yourself, preparing your own food, doing your own dishes, doing your own laundry keeping trash separate and others. This is hard enough without having to include those first three, most critical, days. I am blessed and very thankful to have the opportunity to share these thoughts with others. I hope this helps.
