Emily,

Please note, again, that NRC came to the Webinar and Pine Ridge with an open site survey approach and no plan for protecting the Tribes' confidential cultural resources information. This week has seen progress toward a viable survey methodology, due largely to the first substantive involvement of NRC contractor's meaningful engagement with the Tribe(s).

We are working on Mountain time, and will get something as soon as we've incorporated NRC's input and the input of the Advisory Council. Also, please note that I just arrived in my office and left early yesterday due to the 416 Fire. Among other things, I was removing family photos from our house as a precaution due to the pre-evacuation zone that is set just 1.3 miles north of our house and the Red Flag Warnings in today's forecast.

NRC's ultimatum and pressure to provide the update by an artificial 10 am Mountain time deadline is not well taken. There was never any "promise" or hard deadline set, and both accusations are also not well-taken. These ultimatums are consistent with problems identified the attached Inspector General's criticism of NRC Staff's interactions with Tribes. As we go forward, please reconsider the involvement of FSTB, a Tribal Liason, and other available NRC resources to ensure the survey efforts run more effectively and efficiently.

As Paul stated last Tuesday, flexibility is an important element of the effort to design and carry out the surveys. Although a detailed proposal is forthcoming, and some details may remain unresolved for the oral interviews and September surveys, the Tribe intends to carry out field surveys next week based on the previous correspondence and in person discussions.

Travis,

We are concerned that it is now a full week into this crucial site survey period – where we had expected to have made significant process in actually implementing the survey activities - and the staff still does not have complete information regarding the Tribe's position on the survey effort. The staff accommodated the Tribe's request last Friday afternoon to change the schedule and activities for the field survey efforts. The staff is concerned that the Tribe expects the staff to do so again today, again without a complete understanding of the Tribe's position.

The staff will be making a decision about whether to proceed with any further fieldwork efforts next week by noon ET today. If we don't have the Tribe's updated cultural resources survey proposal by noon ET today, the staff will have to base that decision on the version presented to the staff on Tuesday evening and the comments provided to the staff by the Tribe's advisory council on Wednesday afternoon. Either way, we expect we will be in touch with you again this afternoon, hopefully with this promised new information in hand.

Emily

Diana, Emily,

I need to leave the office to attend to threats posed by the 416 Fire and Kyle has been in the field today on other matters. We expect to have the updated draft to you tomorrow morning.

Perhaps we can schedule a time in the early afternoon Friday to discuss NRC's response on the updated OST proposal. On the call, we can also discuss adjustments to the June 8 schedule for the week of June 18 to reflect the progress made this week.

My schedule is open Friday, so I will leave it to others' availability to set a call.

Thanks,

Travis

Hello Mr. White,

I understand that you will be providing us this afternoon with a new version of the Tribe's June 12 cultural resources survey proposal for the Dewey-Burdock ISR site. Because the NRC staff is still determining how to respond to the June 12 proposal, we would like to consider your revised document before doing so. Given our expectation of this new information from the Tribe this afternoon, and without knowing the nature of those changes, we do not plan to conduct any activities at the Dewey-Burdock ISR site tomorrow. We are letting the other invited Tribes know this as well. We look forward to receiving the information you have indicated you will be sending us today.

Thank you,
Diana
